Abstract:

Religious Tourism differs not that much from all other tourist attractions: it needs thoughtful preparation, very well trained people and excellent infrastructure, all combined in the chosen site: then it brings international customers and becomes the source for regional income. It might equally become a boomerang. How to survive with thousands of visitors and still promote understanding, to install sustainability is the major consideration during development. It is necessary to collect feedback and exchange opinion with all, provider and receiver, learn from outside examples.

The Role of Administration:

Due to secularisation Religious Sites are endangered: they lose their believers and visitors arrive with specialised, sometimes limited knowledge. People travel for fashion; they have preconceptions and need facts; they are exhausted and demand attractive stimulation. To achieve best presentation of the site and intention, the administration is obliged to offer a professional service – train your interpreters.

The Role of Tourist Guides: To combine core knowledge with enthusiasm, to select tales with empathy for the guest, to interpret the local traditions and encourage the guest to admire, enabling the newcomer to love and understand the place. By guiding a wide range of visitors with their wishes and concepts, tourist guides can inform the administration on necessary up-dates. Dealing with so many different people brings information and includes constructive criticism – positive and negative; it encourages development and renewal.

Means to Attract Visitor:

Combine all efforts and create sustainable infrastructure - then the place will remain intact and attractive!
