REGIONAL ACTIVITIES

This report summarises the main activities undertaken by UNWTO since the 51st CAP and 55th CSA meetings in Medellin, Colombia in September 2015 within the framework of the 21st General Assembly. While some of the activities fall under the strategic objectives of sustainability and competitiveness as well as priority areas, others have been carried out upon individual requests received from member States and in collaboration with other partners.

SUSTAINABILITY

World Conference on Tourism for Development (Beijing, China from 18-21 May 2016)

The Conference was organized jointly by the Government of the People’s Republic of China and the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO).

It was the first global event of its kind to be organized after the world crossed the threshold of the 2015 Millennium Development Goals target, seeking to advance tourism’s contribution to the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDG). In other words, the Conference was a response to the decision taken by Governments at the 2015 UN General Assembly to devise and implement policies to promote sustainable tourism that creates jobs and promotes local culture and products while contributing to inclusive and sustainable economic growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all. The importance of the conference was evidenced by the presence of high-level officials of China and of several heads of State and government as well as tourism ministers from over around the world.

The overarching theme of the Conference i.e. “Tourism for Development” with special emphasis on tourism’s contribution to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) focused on how countries align their national development goals with sustainable tourism development through a coordinated action between the public and private sector stakeholders at the national and local levels.

Tourism and Poverty Alleviation was one of the two sub-themes that complemented the main one. This session discussed how governments, the international community and the private sector can collaborate to create an enabling environment to enhance tourism’s contribution to poverty reduction, and the inclusion of disadvantaged groups, particularly youth and women, in the tourism value chain. Panelists also discussed the role of tourism in international development cooperation. The other sub-theme entitled Tourism for Peace sought to create a better understanding and awareness of the linkages between the two fields; undertake state-of-the-art research to broaden knowledge on the subject; and explore how to translate the findings into practical tools for the sector, such as recommendations and guidelines for different stakeholders.
These were intended to foster a “peace-sensitive” tourism sector that has the true potential to contribute to global peace.

UNWTO/PATA Ministerial Debate on Pacific Island Tourism (Guam, USA, 21 May, 2016)

It was co-organised by PATA and UNWTO and gathered representatives from both the public and private sector to share their views and insights on contemporary issues relevant to island tourism destinations in the Pacific in two panel sessions.

The first panel discussion entitled Merging Motivations examined the different motivations and target goals of the government and the private sector. Speakers analysed the areas where they overlap and exchanged ideas on how to better align them to create a better pathway for growth. The second panel session under the title Cloud Nine – the Ideal Island Economy looked into the choices that shape the complete visitor economy of an island and have a direct environmental and cultural impact upon the destination.

The two panel discussions also examined a number of challenges island destinations face as a result of their unique geographical situation including sustainability, climate change, air connectivity and how to position islands as top choice destinations.

Regional Seminar on the Contribution of Islamic Culture and its Impact on the Asian Tourism Market (Bandar Seri Begawan, Brunei Darussalam, 16-17 November 2015)

The Seminar was the outcome of UNWTO’s study on the Contribution of Islamic Culture to Tourism: Asia in Focus which was initiated in January 2015. It was a stocktaking exercise of iconic sights including monuments and cultural centres of Islamic countries in the wider context of Asia as a geographical entity.

The broad aims of the study were to draw attention to the contribution of Islamic culture to world harmony and peace through tourism; to upstage Islamic member countries of UNWTO as attractive emerging tourist destinations in view of their distinctive characteristics that set them apart from each other and from non-Islamic countries; to proffer policy recommendations on infrastructure development and the provision of facilities and services for the development of the tourism resources identified.

Countries covered include Muslim-majority countries (Indonesia, Malaysia, Pakistan, Iran, Bangladesh, Brunei, Maldives); other Asian countries with a significant minority Muslim population (India, China, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Philippines); and non-Islamic countries interested in the potential market (Australia, Japan, Republic of Korea).

The main findings of the study around which the discussions of the regional seminar centred include the following: the Islamic tourism market is increasing in Asia and the Pacific as a result of the rising middle class with disposable income and the propensity to travel; the Islamic majority countries of Asia and the Pacific (Indonesia, Malaysia, Brunei Darussalam) are considered the source markets while countries with a minority Muslim population such as China, India, Thailand, Sri Lanka and Philippines play a dual role as a source market and destination; many destinations in Asia and Pacific with no significant Muslim population are keen on tapping into this lucrative market. However, the key to attracting the potential Muslim travelers depends on the provision of Shariah compliant conditions of which Halal food and facilities for prayer are seen as the indispensable prerequisites for the promotion of this market.

Contribution of Islamic Culture and its Impact on the Asian Tourism Market

The study is being conducted by UNWTO with the sponsorship of China Chamber of Tourism. It is scheduled to be published in the course of 2016.

The generic objectives of the study are three-fold:

- To better understand the huge potential of the emerging market for Islamic tourism, especially in and out of Asia.
- To build bridges between the Muslim and non-Muslim populations and promote a culture of peace, stability and understanding between peoples.
- To develop policy recommendations to enhance facilitation, accessibility to, from and within the Islamic world and the provision of facilities and services for the development of Islamic tourism resources.

In a broader context, the study is also aimed at drawing attention to the contribution of Islamic culture to Asian history and heritage; highlighting Islamic member countries of UNWTO as attractive emerging tourist destinations; and helping them to better tap the potential of intra-Islamic travel.

It includes a broad socio-economic analysis of Asian destinations with a rich Islamic cultural heritage that offers potential for tourism development both domestically as well as internationally.

Sixteen destinations are covered, namely Muslim-majority countries (Indonesia, Malaysia, Pakistan, Iran, Bangladesh, Brunei, Maldives); other Asian countries with a significant minority Muslim population (India, China, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Philippines); and non-Islamic countries interested in the potential market of the growing Islamic tourism market (Australia, Japan, Republic of Korea).

Case Studies of Traditional Cultural Accommodations in the Republic of Korea, Japan and China

Cultural accommodations are emerging as a form of tourism product with a great potential to attract tourists combining traditional lodging services with authentic cultural experiences based on the traditional way of life of the host community. This is because authentic cultural accommodations offer distinctive local experiences that promote the tourism and hospitality industry by utilizing and preserving the uniqueness of the cultural characteristics of a nation’s traditional architecture.

The aim of this report is to explore the development practices of the traditional cultural accommodation sector in North-East Asia in the context of creative tourism. It is based on comparative case studies of the Republic of Korea, Japan, and China and illustrates the different aspects of the various cases selected from the three countries in the traditional cultural accommodation sector. Its focus is on policy interventions that have been currently adopted to facilitate the development process in creative tourism. The analysis of the case studies also provides an overview of recent market situations including the overall lodging industry in these countries.

The findings of the case studies indicate significant academic as well as management implications, in particular, by identifying competitive advantages of the selected accommodation facilities that can maximize the attractiveness of the tangible and intangible cultural heritage as specialized tourism products/programmes. As a result, creative tourism in this report has a number of indications that can strengthen economic development opportunities as well as preserve the nation’s cultural resources that are associated with the traditional cultural accommodation sector.

The findings of the study also demonstrate that the implementation of place marketing and branding activities can promote stakeholder involvement and collaboration in the communication and information flows that are strongly focused on public-private partnership and networking.
