Silk Road Training & Capacity Building Programme: supporting excellence along the historic routes

The Silk Road Training and Capacity Building Programme is a novel executive training initiative aimed at officials from the Silk Road countries participating in the UNWTO Silk Road Programme, university graduates aspiring to work within the tourism industry, and stakeholders interested in the development of the Silk Road as a sustainable and transnational tourism initiative.

Held in collaboration with the UNWTO Themis Foundation, the operational instrument of UNWTO to deliver its education and training activities, and the University of Valencia, an UNWTO Affiliate Member who will provide the setting and necessary academic and technical expertise, the project aims to raise the capacity building standards of the Silk Road by training its future tourism leaders and experts.

This will be achieved by providing participants with technical expertise in the areas of strategic tourism planning, national and transnational cooperation, destination management and tourism route development.

In-line with the specific needs of Silk Road destinations and the strategic objectives of the project partners, participants will employ the knowledge gained by actively working towards the development of trans-national tourism projects. Moreover, outstanding participants will be given the opportunity to implement such projects through the participation in a Silk Road volunteer programme.

Ultimately, the training will foment innovative and practical tourism solutions for the Silk Road by bringing together country officials with young tourism professionals, academics and private sector stakeholders.

The Silk Road Training and Capacity Building Programme is an official activity of the 2017 International Year of Sustainable Tourism for Development.

Project Partners: About Silk Road Programme

The UNWTO Silk Road Programme is responsible for implementing transregional and transnational projects across a broad range of themes and subjects. Designed as a collaborative platform of 33 Member States, the programme is focused on raising the profile of Silk Road tourism through marketing, capacity building and development activities that are sustainable, responsible and internationally competitive. While significant progress has been made since the launch of the Silk Road Programme in 2010, much work remains to be done, especially if participating Member States are to make the most of upcoming global trends that will shape the tourism industry, such as:

• The increase in international tourist arrivals, which are expected to reach the 1.8 billion mark by 2030. During the 2010-2030 period, Asia and the Pacific will be the fastest growing outbound region
• Improved connectivity along the Silk Road, especially via new transnational rail links and air route expansion
• The development of new tourism markets with a strong growth potential, especially cruise/ maritime tourism and youth travel
• An increased demand for cultural tourism that already accounts for around 40% of the global tourism share

As outlined in the UNWTO Silk Road Programme Action Plan, the programme’s framework document, key sectors sustaining the Silk Road tourism concept still need to be strengthened through an approach combining the talent and insight of students with the expertise of participating Member States and UNWTO. Following priority areas to be assessed by this project have been identified:

Silk Road Marketing and Promotional Strategy
In order to strengthen the Silk Road brand and enhance cooperation among Member States following priority areas will need to be addressed:

• Common Silk Road marketing standards and guidelines, including the potential creation of a Silk Road brand logo
• The identification of tourism gaps among Member States, especially in relation to the promotion of the Silk Road as a tourism concept
• The elaboration of strategies to increase the online presence of the Silk Road

Silk Road Destination Management
A more consistent approach to destination management across the Silk Road is needed. The route’s rich cultural heritage and the distribution of interrelated tourism sites make it ideal for cross-border initiatives and regional investment opportunities, yet a number of challenges are currently impeding its full growth and development. Therefore, the project should aim to:

• Identify, with the help of Member States, specific regions that require capacity building and destination management assistance
• Identify and outline a development plan focused on the Silk Road’s key strengths, interests and markets
• Develop a tourism product for the Silk Road with the intention of situating it on the tourism map

The city of Valencia and its connection to the Silk Road

Valencia is the capital of the autonomous community of Valencia. It is the third largest city in Spain with around 800,000 inhabitants in the administrative city centre. Its urban area extends beyond the administrative city limits with a population of around 1.7 million. Valencia has a potent tourism industry and is located on the Mediterranean coast, one of the most important economic centres of Spain. Valencia’s connection to the Silk Road goes back centuries. From the 14th century onwards, silk production was one of the most powerful industries within the Valencian region. At its peak, during the second half of the 18th century, it is estimated that around twenty-five thousand city inhabitants were engaged in the production and trade of silk. Numerous attractions located throughout the city highlight the once domineering position of the silk trade. One of the most important buildings is the “Lonja de los Mercaderes”, also called the Silk Exchange. Built between 1482 and 1548, the building is a masterpiece of Mediterranean Gothic civil architecture and was declared a World Heritage Site by UNESCO in 1996.

The masters of the silk trade settled in the city centre, and even today the neighborhood is called “Barrio de Velluters”, velluters meaning “artisans of silk”. The College of High Silk Art, a further prominent example of Valencian architecture and culture, is located within this popular neighborhood. Formerly threatened by decay, it was restored and has been open to the public since 2016. Valencia provides a good model for other destinations looking to build on their Silk Road heritage. Reformed and placed within a historical-cultural context that builds upon World Heritage Sites, gastronomy and popular traditions, the legacy of silk is nowadays promoted to the local and tourist alike, in what can be considered as a best-practice example in terms of adding attractiveness and potential to a region already well-established within the tourism circuit.
