SUSTAINABLE WINE TOURISM

Rowald Hepp, Schloss Vollrads
Raquel Rupérez Santos, Bodegas Beronia
Joao Barroso, Vinhos do Alentejo
Paul Wagner
Napa Valley College
WHAT DOES “SUSTAINABLE” MEAN?

Lodi rules: “Sustainability means leaving everything – people, places, etc – as good or better than how we found it.”
BOTTLED WATER

Not at National Parks— but they will sell you a water bottle and have hydration stations throughout the parks.

And they sell stickers for each park to decorate your water bottle!
Traffic jams had ruined the experience of visiting Yosemite, so they limited access to cars.
MACCHU PICCHU—LOCAL INVOLVEMENT

Every hiker on the Inka Trail must hire a local porter, providing employment for local communities on the trail, but also creating community between the locals and the tourists.
Hands-on activities
American Hiking Association hosts groups to work on the trails of the High Sierra.
Private bus company leads groups out on a different itinerary every day—picks up at all local hotels. And nobody drives after drinking.
MATTHIASSON GIVES WINERY TOURS IN YOUR HOME

Personal wine tastings via Zoom when you buy wine, creating a human connection to every customer.

No traffic. No travel. No trouble.
A Wine Education Complex at Napa Valley College

“...if there was ever an educational institution poised for significant contributions to the growth of the California wine industry, this is it,”

- Marvin R. Shanken
OUR SPEAKERS TODAY:

Rowald Hepp
Schloss Vollrads

Raquel Rupérez Santos
Bodegas Beronia

Joao Barroso
Vinhos do Alentejo